Dear Dean White:

As you, your staff and students launch your latest and substantial contribution to the gaming industry, the UNLV Gaming Law Journal, please accept my appreciation and good wishes to all involved in its creation and publication.

This new journal's scholarly approach is yet another advance in the Boyd School of Law's mission: to train new lawyers, to produce and disseminate new knowledge about the law, and to serve the various communities of which it is a part.

Undoubtedly, the journal will provide every student participating in its production with an exceptional educational opportunity. Not only will your students learn from those outside experts that will contribute their knowledge through written articles, your students will also benefit from the inclusion of their own written contributions to the journal.

I am confident that the UNLV Gaming Law Journal will soon be celebrated as the leading review of gaming law at the international level. Along with expressing my gratitude to the Boyd School of Law participants, I also extend my appreciation to the International Masters of Gaming Law for their financial and intellectual support.

Sincerely,
