From Dan

Christopher Gillbert shared his thoughts on the tides of change facing the law school with his recent review of the new law school, as featured in the UNLV Law Magazine. He discussed the evolution of legal education and the challenges faced by educators and students alike. Gillbert highlighted the importance of adaptability and innovation in the legal field, urging the community to embrace the changes and work towards a more inclusive and diverse legal profession.

Jennifer Goss

Jennifer Goss, a first-year law student, recently published an article in the UNLV Law Review. Her piece focuses on the impact of technology on the legal profession. Goss argues that the integration of technology has not only transformed the way we practice law but also has the potential to democratize access to justice. She calls for legal educators to incorporate technology into their teaching methods to prepare students for the rapidly changing legal landscape.

Andrew Marsman

Andrew Marsman joined the UNLV Law faculty as the Director of Legal Research and Writing. Marsman brings extensive experience in legal education and research, having previously taught at several law schools. As the Director, Marsman will oversee the curriculum and instruction in legal research and writing, ensuring that students are equipped with the skills necessary to succeed in their legal careers.

David McClure

David McClure was appointed as the Director of the Clinical Program at UNLV Law. McClure has a wealth of experience in legal education and practice, having served in various positions at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, and the University of California, Hastings College of the Law. His role will focus on enhancing the practical training component of the law school curriculum, ensuring that students gain hands-on experience in real-world legal settings.

Saman Jassan

Saman Jassan is a new member of the law school faculty, joining as an associate professor in the Center for Law and Justice. Jassan’s research interests include social justice and human rights. His appointment reflects the law school’s commitment to fostering a diverse and inclusive academic community that addresses pressing social issues.

Chad Schulte

Chad Schulte has been appointed as the Associate Dean for Student Affairs. Schulte brings a wealth of experience in student affairs and leadership, having previously held positions at several universities. As Associate Dean, Schulte will work closely with students to enhance their academic and professional development, ensuring a supportive and inclusive environment that fosters student success.

Matthew Wright

The Chancellor of UNLV Law announced the appointment of Matthew Wright as the associate dean for academic affairs. Wright brings a strong background in legal education and administration, having served in various leadership roles at the University of Virginia School of Law and the University of Arizona. His appointment is expected to further strengthen the law school’s academic programs and research initiatives.
